FOREWORD.

But very few of Bach's Church Cantatas are musical units in themselves, in the sense that the different numbers constituting the Cantata bear such a relation to one another, either musical or textual, that something important is lost by not hearing them continuously in their prescribed order. A few of the earlier ones,—such as Gottes Zeit, No. 106 (1711), Nach dir Herr, No. 150 (1712), and Aus der Tiefe, No. 131 (1707),—are constructed continuously and should be so performed. In a few others, such as Christ lag in Todesbanden, No. 4 (1725), and Lobet den Herren der mächtigen König, No. 137 (1732), each movement is based on the same choral melody, which binds the numbers together. In still others, like In allen meinen Taten, No. 97 (1734), the text of each number is in the same poetic form. Except, however, for these three classes, and for the two Passions, the Christmas and Easter Oratorios, and the six great Motets, it would be impossible for the greatest Bach expert, if the movements of any ten Cantatas were all shuffled up together, to put them back again in their places, except by arbitrarily remembering in which Cantata the different movements happen to come. There are at least eighty numbers which Bach himself used twice or more in different choral works.

Accordingly, there appears to be no sound reason why one may not pick out, from various Cantatas, several movements which are related textually and are at the same time musically compatible, and make of them a Cantata which calls for a convenient paucity of soloists and instruments and at the same time contains no number which is less interesting and thrilling than the others. By this I do not mean that any Bach is uninteresting,—merely that a great deal of Bach is much more interesting than much which is less so.

When, several years ago, I became convinced of this, I began the fascinating pursuit of making these Integrated Cantatas, the possibility for which is infinite.

Obviously, the initial requisite is textual coherence. Given a subject, such as Humility, Christ the Good Shepherd, Our Hearts as God's Dwelling Place, God's Bounty to Man, etc., it is necessary first to pick out all the numbers in all the Cantatas the text of which has a reasonable relation to the subject, and from them then put together those which are the most beautiful, which will properly go together musically, and which require the desired soloists and instruments. There being no such Bach Concordance in existence, even in German, I set about making one; and here it is.

Perhaps I can best explain what it is by telling briefly the method which I pursued in making it.

Having completed translations of all the Choral Works, I first determined on the principal subjects dealt with in the texts, such as God, Christ, Prayer, Praise, Rejoicing, Heaven, Satan, Sin, Man, World, Christians, Death, Tribulation, Foes, Judgment Day, Hypocrisy, Neighbor, Repentance, etc., with appropriate subdivisions for each. A number of such designations are doubtless arbitrary with me; I have tried to offset this difficulty by means of copious cross-references. Despite these, the user will have to study the whole and familiarize himself with my peculiarities of nomenclature before he can make the best use of it.

Having determined on the major titles, I went through my English texts of all the choral works, line by line, and card-indexed them by appropriate titles, sub-titles, and further subdivisions, noting on separate cards, as I went along, as cross-references, all titles which I thought might be looked for by others. I then went through them a second, third, and fourth time to determine if each was indexed where I thought it should be, as a result of which most of the ideas in the texts will be found indexed under several different headings, which should facilitate their location. Finally, I checked all the cards back into the texts to be sure that the references were correct. From the cards this Concordance was then constructed. There are doubtless still some mistakes, but I hope not many.

The meaning of the figures and letters is as follows:

The first figure, where not in parentheses, is the number of the Cantata, as per the numbering used in the Bachgesellschaft Edition and in the Breitkopf & Härtel piano scores. Where the first number is in parentheses, it is a Simple Chorale and the number refers to the 389 Chorales in the Richter (B & H) edition. If the first number is preceded by M, J, X, or E, it refers to the St. Matthew or St. John Passion, or to the Christmas or Easter Oratorio. Mot. means one of the six great Motets. German words, such as "Schwingt freudig", refer to the 15 Cantatas, without numbers, published only in the Bachgesellschaft Edition. 204 of the 389 simple chorales in the Richter (B & H) edition are also in the Church Cantatas (Nos. 1-199) or in the Passions, Oratorios or Motets. This Index does not always refer to them in both places, but they can always be located in the other place by referring to my texts of the Chorales, where the other reference is given.

The number in parentheses which follows the Cantata number is that of the movement in the specified Cantata. The letters which follow the parentheses have the following meanings:

Capital letters signify Arias, Duets, or Choruses; small letters signify Recitatives or simple Chorales. S, A, T, or B mean Soprano, Alto, Tenor, or Bass. The letters ss, aa, tt, or bb mean Ariosos for the respective voices. Thus, the first item on page 1, 196 (1) C, means the first number of Cantata 196, which is a Chorus; the second item, 57 (2) s, means the second number of Cantata 57, which is a Recitative for Soprano. The first item under Abram's Bosom, J (68) c, means that it is No. 68 of the St. John Passion, a simple chorale. (154) means No. 154 of the Richter Choralgesänge. Under Accounting (Caesar's Penny), 163 (1) T, (2) b, (3) B, (4) S-A, means that Caesar's Penny is referred to four times in Cantata 163; in the first movement, which is a Tenor Aria; in the second movement, a Bass Recitative; in the third movement, a Bass Aria; and in the fourth, a Duet-Aria for Soprano and Alto.

CF means Choral Fantasia, CM choral motet; cf means "compare"—Suc etc. means a Soprano Unison Chorale.

(G) signifies that the idea indexed is in the German text, but not in the English. (E) means that it is in the English, but not in the German; that is to say, invented by me for the reasons which I have endeavored to explain in my Introduction to the Translated Texts.

At the end of the Concordance is a tabulation of Bible references. This does not, of course, purport to be exhaustive or to include the oft-recurring or less direct references.

In the Introduction to Volume I, containing the translations of Cantatas 1-100, I said:

“At the end of the Concordance will be a table giving, as to each Cantata, the references and discussions of it in all the principal books and magazine articles on Bach; also a list of all the editions publishing the music with English words; with additional useful information as to the time of performance and suitability of the different movements. * * *”

This data has grown to such proportions that I have decided to put it in a separate Volume (Vol. V). This will permit further revision of it, as well as its submission to my much appreciated critics before publication, which I hope will be possible sometime during 1943.

Of what practical use this Concordance will be without a complete and cheap edition of Bach with English texts, I do not know; but, as Franklin said, “What is the use of a new born baby?”

NATURE OF SIN

The ways of sin are subtle and insidious 54(2)a
like a sword of steel
to pierce the soul 54(2)a
There is no health in us 4(2)S-A (E)
There is no soundness in my body because of my
evil doing 25(1)C
Sicknesses of the soul
described 25(2)t
Man is prone to sin 9(2)b, 77(5)A
a child of sin 132(3)B
a slave of sin 55(1)T
deep in us, my
greatest foe 139(5)s
The world is a den of iniquity 38(2)a
We are bred and born to sin which rules us from within (301)
It has made God's temple
a den of thieves 90(3)B
It is increasing (94)
All recorded in the Book 168(3)T
It brings but grief 40(3)c
Each sinner blames
the other 105(3)S

SIN

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF

We are unworthy sinners (132)
sorry sinners (303)
thirsting for evil 114(3)b
Our evil deeds are innumerable 89(2)a
We seek the paths of sin,
none of us are righteous 9(2)b
Our sin and guilt rise
to Heaven 87(4)t
I know that my sins are gross and base (78)
and deep abhorred (252)

TORMENTS OF CONTRITION

Torments described 48(2)a
My grievous sin besets
me sore 101(5)t&c
I ponder them with dread 170(5)A
My heart is oppressed
by them 199(1)s
is a well of tears 199(2)S
My vices burden me sore (137)
sicken me and gnaw my vitals like a canker 179(5)S
My conscience frets me 131(4)A-T
and gives me no peace 199(1)s
I cannot hope for Heaven 199(1)s
I quake with fear and fright 113(3)B
am speechless with dread 116(2)A
and terror at the
reckoning 168(2)t
Sinners are quaking,
each blames the other 105(3)S
Grief rends penitent hearts M(10)A
